What does it mean to borrow? To borrow something means to take it and use it for a certain time. Maybe something is borrowed for minutes, or hours, or days, or weeks, or months. When the time is all done, the thing that was borrowed is given back to the person or place it was borrowed from.

I enjoy looking at books and reading books.

Some books belong to me, and some books belong to other people or libraries. If a book belongs to me, I can keep it.

If a book belongs to another person, or to a library, I can look at the book or read the book, then I must give the book back to the person or the library. It is OK! Maybe I can borrow the book again sometime!

Wyndham Hotel has some nice books for people to borrow. Some may be books I would like to look at or read.

I can choose a book to look at during our visit to the hotel.

The books at the Wyndham Hotel are like library books. They belong to the hotel. The people at the hotel are happy to let me look at my book in our hotel room while I am visiting.

When it is time to leave the Wyndham Hotel, I will put the book back where it belongs. This will make my family and the people at the Wyndham Hotel proud of me for returning the book so another hotel guest can borrow the book when they visit the Wyndham Hotel.

Maybe my library at home will have the same book, and maybe I can borrow the book from the library when I go home!

I will be proud of myself for making a good choice by returning the book that belongs to Wyndham Hotel!
