I Can Talk About Food
There are lots of foods in the world.
Some foods are crunchy.
Some foods are sweet.
Some foods are sour.

lemon

pickles

sour candy

yogurt
Foods are many different colors.
Some foods, I like. Some foods, I hate.
But I can talk about foods without getting upset.
I might say....

I don’t care for green beans.
Or I could say....

Cheeseburgers aren’t my favorite...
...but I like sandwiches just fine.
Or I might even say....

I could go for pancakes....
...but I don’t want any oatmeal.
Today, here’s what I will say about food:

I really like
Today, here’s what I will say about food:

...but I don’t want to eat
It makes my teacher and my friends happy when I talk about foods this way.

I’d like a hot dog, please!
It makes my teacher and my friends happy when I talk about foods this way.

I’m so happy you asked for one!
When I use words to tell them about foods I like or don’t like, they understand how I feel.

I don’t want any peas!
When I use words to tell them about foods I like or don’t like, they understand how I feel.

That’s too bad!

I don’t like them either!

I know how you feel!
Special thanks to Sarah Chaney and her students at Bethune Academy-Horizons Elementary, Davenport, Florida

The University of South Florida
Center for Autism and Related Disabilities 1-800-333-4530
http://card-usf.fmhi.usf.edu cookies
apple lollipops ice cream popcorn pear broccoli

grapes

pizza

green beans

raisins

macaroni and cheese